International Conference on Research and Initiatives against Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation

The Open Universiteit, the Netherlands Institute for the Study of Crime and Law Enforcement (NSCR), and Vrije Universiteit are pleased to announce a two-day conference on the topic of human trafficking and sexual exploitation. This engaging and thought provoking conference aims to provide a glimpse into the various experiences and approaches adopted by experts from different fields against human trafficking. The audience can look forward to a series of interesting presentations by academics/researchers, policy makers, law enforcement officials, and other experts as well as a panel discussion with sex workers from around the world that address the nature and methods of anti-trafficking interventions.
